Dominant Buying Motive: DOMINATE

Mike wants Oakwood to own the local search results for both Personal Injury and Employment Law, not just win cases quietly.

"It's working horribly."

"Dominate local market categories."

What he wants:

- Own the category. Show up first for car accident and employment law searches in LA.
- Give Employment Law its own engine. Not one riding on PI's reputation.
- Get out of the marketing weeds. Stop fixing GBP categories himself.

What is stopping him:

- No paid marketing history. ChatGPT Ads is pre-launch — zero results yet.
- Invisible locally. Did not surface in any local search tested.
- GBP compliance gaps. No DBA, keyword-stuffed name, no Employment category until this call.
- No one owns marketing. Vendor Levitate only edits when asked.

Why This Marketing Package

What it does for him:

- Turns Employment Law from word-of-mouth into a lead-generating channel.
- Gets Oakwood found in the searches West Coast Trial Lawyers and Emrani win today.

Full Service Marketing — Starter | $5,697/mo bundled

- HubSpot shows $3M+ (Platinum territory), but this was a ChatGPT Ads call, not a Solution Call — Starter standalone is the seller-approved offer per Slack, 9/14/26.
- Ad spend redirected to Employment Law only per seller direction, capped at Starter's $25,000/mo ceiling.
- Pricing is locked in proposal_review.json — check with Dan before reopening.

Why This Coaching Package

No coaching or ops package this round — here's why:

- This was a ChatGPT Ads call, not the Solution Call on services — Mike and Dan agreed to "chat later."
- Team size and ops structure weren't detailed, so a coaching fit can't be scoped yet.
- Elite Coach Plus ($3,200/mo) or FCOO Advisor ($3,297/mo) are the natural next add at the follow-up call.

Why This Ad Spend

What it does for him:

- Gets Employment Law paid campaigns live for the first time.
- Builds a cost-per-acquisition baseline before scaling further.

Recommended Ad Spend Range:

- Conservative: $10,000/mo — seller-specified, near combined channel minimums.
- Aggressive: $25,000/mo — capped at Starter's ad spend ceiling (uncapped figure was $40,000/mo).

Estimated Return on Investment:

- Conservative: 12 cases x $8K = $96K/mo vs. $10K spend = 9.6x return.
- Aggressive: 36 cases x $8K = $288K/mo vs. $25K spend = 11.5x return.

Estimates only. Employment Law CPL uses a Business Law proxy; close rate (15%) and case value ($8K) are defaults/seller inputs, not transcript-stated.

How the range was calculated:

- Conservative: Business Law proxy minimums (PPC+LSA+Meta) ≈ $10,200, rounded to $10,000.
- Aggressive: 20% rule with Tier 1 LA multiplier exceeds Starter's cap, so $25,000 ceiling used instead.
- Total at aggressive: $5,697 + $25,000 = $30,697/mo = 12.3% of monthly revenue. Under the 35% cap.

If He Pushes Back

"Isn't $5,697/mo a lot when we haven't talked pricing yet?"

Seller-approved Starter standalone — scaled down from the Platinum tier his $3M+ revenue implies, since this was a ChatGPT Ads call, not the Solution Call.

"Why Employment Law instead of PI, our bigger practice?"

Employment Law has less entrenched paid competition (Setyan Law, Custis Law are smaller) — cheaper to win visibility than out-bidding West Coast Trial Lawyers in PI.

"How do we know this will pay off?"

Even the conservative case — 12 cases/mo at $8,000 vs. $10,000 spend — projects a 9.6x return. Estimates, not guarantees.
