Prospect Snapshot

Owner	Revenue	Team	Stage	Close Rate	Location
Wes Eddington and Adam Gleason	~$1.98M (est.)	~7	4	Not stated	Denver, CO

Dominant Buying Motive: FREEDOM

A firm that runs itself so Wes and Adam can focus on growing and be away without it crumbling.

> "a perfect world and growing, we could bring in staff and at least have the faith to know that, hey, things are going to be running smoothly … if we're both not here, … the whole place isn't going to go crumbling"

> "I work on vacation."

> "Wes and I are doing everything."

What they want:

- Daily fires off their plates. Someone to hand tech and staff issues to.
- Onboarding that is streamlined. The office manager will handle hiring, firing, and SOPs.
- A roadmap. Wes: "Just a roadmap or something."
- Formal accountability. Objective weekly check-ins on what is being done.

What is stopping them:

- They are in every case. Both attorneys touch daily work and tech problems.
- Tech switch in motion. Moving from Clio to EVE OS. Integrations are a high priority.
- A fresh bad experience. They ended their prior part-time COO just before the call. Access has not been handed over.
- Trial in about four weeks. Wes is in trial prep. Adam is the lead contact.
- Marketing vendor is active. A rebrand and new site launch in a month or two.

Why This FCOO Package

What it does for them:

- Gives them one accountable owner for daily operations and tech issues.
- Builds hiring, onboarding, and SOPs before the associates arrive.
- Adds the objective weekly rhythm Adam asked for.

FCOO Director | $5,797/mo stand-alone price

- Seller switched FCOO Advisor to FCOO Director in Slack on 11/5. The seller choice stands.
- Only one bundle-eligible product, so the stand-alone price applies. No bundle savings.
- Includes weekly group coaching, masterminds, quarterly workshops, and one annual in-person workshop.
- Revenue is the HubSpot range midpoint ($961K–$3M), seller-confirmed. Not stated on the call.

Why No Marketing or Ad Spend

- The call was about operations. They just hired a marketing agency for a rebrand and new site.
- Adam wants to stop "getting bogged down in the marketing and the daily operations."
- No ad spend, ROI table, or Block 4 in the report. No marketing package is proposed.
- If marketing comes up later, Denver personal injury needs approval. Marketing waits until the agency work is done.

Confirm Before The Call

- Revenue. Never stated. $1.98M is the HubSpot midpoint. Ask for the real number.
- Reviews. All review counts and ratings are unconfirmed. Verify live before the call.
- Missing data. No PageSpeed, 3-pack, Google Ads, LSA, or Meta data was observed. Re-run for figures.
- Site claims. Site says four states, since 1984. They called themselves a small two-attorney firm. Ask.
- FCOO or CTO. You said COO first, maybe technical later. A CTO or LAW package needs delivery confirmed.
- Handover. Put access and credentials from the prior COO on the Phase 1 agenda. Keep it gentle.
- Who joins. Adam leads. The office manager should join the check-ins.

If They Push Back

"Is $5,797 a month too much?"

About 3.5% of estimated monthly revenue, far under the 35% cap. Adam said "we have the capital to market," and Wes wants to put money to work by year end.

"We tried a fractional COO. It was an endless hamster wheel."

That was part-time and not tied to deliverables. Adam said they should have kept closer tabs. This gives a roadmap and the objective weekly check-ins he asked for.

"Will you handle our tech and the EVE OS integration?"

Wes called integrations a high priority. Start with the COO owning issues. Move to a technical arrangement only if coding is needed.
